The Covid 19 pandemic has enhanced and consolidated already existing trends towards online and hybrid teaching as well as more interactive, student-centered teaching methods and the application of educational technological tools. It has also favoured the internationalisation of universities worldwide, and has led to increased staff and student diversity, and to further adoption of English as a medium of instruction. This has meant increased challenges but also opportunities for educational establishments. This is why the DYNAMIDE teaching community is organizing its second online Congress on distance and hybrid, interactive, innovative teaching methods for higher education teaching professionals to share their experience in these fields.

This event will be a great opportunity for teaching professionals to learn from each other, as well as from more experienced academics and experts. The Congress will take place over 2 half days: on the 13th and 14th of October 2022, from 8:30 to 13:30 CEST, which will be devoted to 1) interactive distance and hybrid teaching 2) the internationalisation of teaching and overcoming the challenges of English as a medium of instruction.

Each half-day will begin with a plenary discussion with specialists on the theme of the day followed by several 10-minute presentations and Q&A sessions. We encourage you to present teaching experience, case studies or new tools on these themes. We are planning to schedule 5 presentations per half-day. The conference is free of charge and open to everyone but is specifically addressed to the DYNAMIDE participants.
